INTRODUCTION

Glenrock Economic Development Corporation (GEDC) is a non-profit organization formed in 1998. Community members came together to form GEDC, a group that would pursue businesses that were appropriate for the growth of the community.

Several plans have been completed over the years, such as business surveys and community assessments. In 2016 GEDC contracted with Joe Coyne, Community Builders, Inc. to facilitate a workshop to help with a Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats (SWOT) analysis. In August, 2016, GEDC conducted a new business survey to help define what is needed by the existing business community and what may be needed in the future.

This strategic plan will serve to guide GEDC efforts over the next five years. The plan is based on community input, objective analysis, and builds on existing strengths, addresses weaknesses, seizes opportunities, and prepares the community to meet economic threats. The plan is organized according to the economic development building blocks that are promoted by the Wyoming Business Council and the Wyoming Economic Development Association (WEDA). Those building blocks include:

- Leadership/Civic Development/Public Policy
- Quality of Life
- Workforce Development
- Infrastructure Development
- Existing Business Development
- Entrepreneur Development
- New Business Recruitment

BUILDING BLOCK STRATEGIES

LEADERSHIP/CIVIC DEVELOPMENT/PUBLIC POLICY:

- GEDC will provide Economic Development 101 Training to community leaders and organizations
  - Identify groups and leaders who may be interested; create event focused on WEDA’s building blocks presentation; follow up for volunteers and support.
- Support the Town of Glenrock with reviews and updates of all its development codes, ordinances and policies
- GEDC needs to engage the community
  - Outreach to schools, churches, bars, community organizations, teach economic development; seek input about community values and desires
  - Participatory approach to community decision making
- GEDC needs to engage existing businesses
  - Simplify WBC’s Synchronist Survey or develop one that invites businesses to say what they want/need; organize an ad hoc group of volunteers to reach out to EVERY business in town; host focus groups (maybe on an ongoing basis over coffee?); host public meetings
- GEDC will provide leadership and information to improve community marketing
  - Update website; develop media/marketing plan; provide current information about the local economy (use CBI newsletters?); maintain continual communication with local elected leaders and officials.
    - Website: www.glenrock.org
    - Mobile App with town
    - Bi-weekly reports with town council
  - Deliberate transition of power to a younger generation of leaders
  - Celebrate diversity in leadership
- GEDC will build partnerships with other groups
  - Identify other organizations that support economic development and business growth; seek to identify common ground to support economic development goals; coordinate efforts with others using clear communication and fair collaboration.

S.W.O.T. Analysis

Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, and Threats is a framework for identifying and analyzing the internal and external factors that can have an impact on the viability of a project, product, place or person.

As its name states, a S.W.O.T. analysis examines four elements:
- Strengths - internal attributes and resources that support a successful outcome.
- Weaknesses - internal attributes resources that work against a successful outcome.
- Opportunities - external factors the project can capitalize on or use to its advantage.
- Threats - external factors that could jeopardize the project.

Once the SWOT factors are identified, decision makers should be able to better ascertain if the project or goal is worth pursuing and what is required to make it successful. The analysis aims to help an organization match its resources to the competitive environment in which it operates.

Stakeholders, consisting of GEDC Board Members, Town Department Heads and Mayor & Council met on January 12, 2016, with Joe Coyne of CBI, to identify S.W.O.T in Glenrock.

1. Pursue Wyoming Business Council Leads.
   The Wyoming Business Council provides leads for business recruitment. Those leads often provide a very brief time in which proposals must be submitted, and so Glenrock needs to be ready in advance. A template shall be created for proposals, including an accurate description of the town’s economy, the reasoning for a prospective business to come to Glenrock, contact information for key community leaders, etc. Coordinate development of the template and specific proposals with our WBC Regional Director.

2. Pursue specific targets.
   Glenrock needs to be specific about what the town wants. The best targets are the ones that build on our strengths (e.g., energy, travel, tourism, guns & ammunition, manufacturing, machinery, etc.) or resolve our weaknesses (e.g., Internet/broadband connectivity and retail leakage). The town’s efforts should target specific industries, businesses, and individuals.

3. Market community’s uniqueness.
   A town branding effort is underway with the development of Glenrock’s Comprehensive Development Plan. A brand is helpful in that it has certain uniqueness about the town that can grab the attention of potential visitors. When competing for new businesses, it is important to stand out from the crowd. Glenrock citizens believe that we have a high quality of life and that it is a great place to live and work. We need to own what and who we are and our uniqueness will attract others. Perhaps it will be the Pony Express, historical trails, the dinosaurs or our natural resources.

4. Support for existing businesses and local residents are critical to recruit new business.
   Place emphasis on existing business, while staying open minded to new business investments.

5. There’s Energy in Synergy.
   GEDC’s plan to create energy with local businesses by working together to accomplish a successful future for all of Glenrock’s businesses.

6. Encourage new products and services that will enhance Glenrock’s identity.
   Glenrock’s history is based off of the Pony Express, historical trails of the Mormon, Oregon and California Trails, railroad, dinosaurs, the Rock in the Glen and the extraction of natural resources. Consumers, including travelers, are interested in buying unique items and experiencing local activities. There is a growing demand for such products and services, such as cultural tourism. Local entrepreneurs need encouragement and support to provide these things. Promotion of a local brand helps but, in addition, local entrepreneurs need help creating a sound business plan, finding financing, and pulling together all the other resources they need to succeed (legal, accounting, property, partners, employees, etc.). A sound economic strategy is centered on continual investment in local entrepreneurs.

7. Start an entrepreneurship challenge competition and scholarship.
   One way to highlight the value of and community support for entrepreneurs is to host an entrepreneurship challenge competition and scholarship. New start-ups and existing businesses need a variety of support to get them going or keep them going. Create a scholarship program through the schools. Work with the high school to develop a budget for grant funds and scholarships to promote entrepreneurs through a Business Plan Contest. Business plans can be submitted to a small committee group, consisting of GEDC, Glenrock Main Street and Town representatives that are empowered to select a winning plan, and the reward is a scholarship for a high school student and a start-up/improvement grant for the business owner. The contest should increase awareness of entrepreneurship, and allow the entire business community to participate in the success.

8. Understand that most economic growth comes from existing businesses.
   Economic development is a difficult and long-term endeavor. GEDC intends to help our established businesses grow, plan and market themselves, identify specific problems, and work with them toward solutions. Be conscious that when new businesses locate to Glenrock, one of the first things they will do is ask existing businesses how they are treated. New businesses will not come if they think we will not care about them and their existence. It is critical to know local business owners’ needs. The Wyoming Business Council uses a structured process (the Synchronist Survey) to measure existing business needs and growth and this survey is available for use. GEDC—“Energy in Synergy,” is a goal to visit with businesses in Glenrock and document their needs and successes. There’s energy in working together!

9. Work toward improving broadband/fiber access.
   A fiber study was conducted as a county wide effort for all towns and municipalities within Converse and Niobrara Counties. This study should be used to work towards enhancing Glenrock’s needs. A copy of this study is included in the Appendices.

10. Continue to engage WBC programs and funding.
    Glenrock needs to continue to use the resources of the Wyoming Business Council. Past success are the Commerce Block, Sharps Rifle and McGinley Orthopaedic. Recapture funds from these projects are to be used for economic development projects and the local Main Street committee.

11. Support affordable housing for working residents
    Support the town, the town attorney and the planning department with residential development and support efforts to encourage land owners to sell their buildable, residential lots. Work with developers on developing incorporated land within the town and support
12. Continue to support, enhance and maintain community facilities that meet local needs.
GEDC shall support the town in its efforts to support the Glenrock Rec Center and its endeavors to renovate and expand its facilities. Glenrock will continue to invest in maintaining and improving its community facilities for residents. For example, the South Recreation Complex. Currently the town in undergoing a Master Plan of the South Rec. Other improvements for the community consist of the parks and trails.

13. Encourage restaurants and accommodations.
Retention of local restaurants is an important economic development goal, and not just to provide a better quality of life. Restaurants and lodging establishments are a critical element of Glenrock’s tourism market, along with sporting events and conferences.

14. Develop more activities for all residents to enjoy.
Glenrock residents love outdoor recreation. GEDC shall support the town with the enhancement to public lands, creation of new festivities and events, biking/walking paths, historical trails, Box Elder Park, South Recreation Complex, Platte River, Deer Creek and other developments that will further enhance the quality of life. Marketing Glenrock’s outdoor activities will bring awareness to local residents and tourists.

15. Continue to make improvements to downtown/Main Street areas.
GEDC will support the Town of Glenrock and Glenrock Main Street in its efforts to enrich and preserve the character of the downtown. Glenrock has a rich history, one that can be preserved while growing economic opportunity.

16. Improve communication and transparency with the general public.
GEDC will initiate “Energy in Synergy” and improve communications with local businesses. Reports will be given to the Glenrock Town Council and public at the council meetings and annually with the Converse County Commissioners. All energies to enhance communications with businesses and residents will be made, to continue the success of the economic development efforts.

17. As needed, modify policies, regulations, and codes to be pro-development.
GEDC shall work with the town and its planning department to conduct a review of all development policies, codes, and procedures. When possible, suggestions of developers can address current information on issues and concerns. This should be an exercise that is conducted every few years or as needed.

18. GEDC annual review of Strategic Plan.
GEDC shall review the Strategic Plan annually to modify, improve and implement changes as Glenrock progresses and grows.

20 Clues to Rural Community Survival- An Annotated List

1. Evidence of Community Pride
Successful communities are often showplaces of community care and attention, with neatly trimmed yards, public gardens, and well-kept public parks. But pride also shows up in other ways, especially in community festivals and events that give residents the chance to celebrate their community, its history and heritage.

2. Emphasis on Quality in business and Community Life
People in successful communities believe that something worth doing is worth doing right. Facilities are built to last, and so are homes and other improvements. Newer brick additions to schools are common, for example, and businesses are built or expanded with attention to design and construction detail.

3. Willingness to Invest in the Future
Some of the brick and mortar investments are most apparent, but these communities also invest in their future in other ways. Residents invest time and energy in community improvement projects, and they concern themselves with how what they are doing today will impact the lives of their children and grandchildren in the future.

4. Participatory Approach to Community Decision Making
Authoritarian models don’t seem to exist in these communities, and power is deliberately shared. People still know who you need on your side to get something done, but even the most powerful of opinion leaders seem to work through the systems-formal as well as informal-to build consensus for what they want to do.

5. Cooperative Community Spirit
Successful rural communities devote more attention to cooperative activities than to fighting over what should be done and by whom. The focus is on working together toward a common goal with positive results. They may spend a long time making a decision, and there may be disagreements along the way, but eventually, as one small town leader put it, “stuff does get done.”

6. Realistic Appraisal of Future Opportunities
Many of the communities have already learned an important strategic lesson, namely building on your assets and minimizing your weaknesses. Few small communities believe that they are likely to land a giant industry. Many of them say they wouldn’t want one if it came along, fearing too much dependence on one employer would be dangerous. The successful communities know that a more realistic approach considers the community and the region as the context for future opportunities.

7. Awareness of Competitive Positioning
The thriving communities know who the competition is and so do the businesses. Everyone tries to stress local loyalty as a way to help, but many small businesses also keep tabs on their competitors in other towns--they don’t want any of the hometown folks to have an excuse to go elsewhere. This is an area in which the recognition of community assets—people, associations and institutions—is vitally important. The comparison of one town to another is a significant means to spur improvements.
8. Knowledge of the Physical Environment
Importance of location is underscored continuously in local decision-making as business and civic leaders picture their community in relation to others. Beyond location, however, communities must also be familiar with what they have locally. For example, the issue of preservation and protection of natural resources must be balanced with development options. Communities that manage this balance have a long-term approach to both environmental preservation and economic development.

9. Active Economic Development Program
An organized and active approach to economic development is common in successful communities. This type of approach depends on public and private sector resources working hand in hand. Private economic development corporations are common, either as a subcommittee or an outgrowth of a Chamber of Commerce or commercial club. However, it’s clear that the most successful towns emphasize retaining and expanding existing businesses as well as trying to develop new businesses. This is a “gardening not hunting” model of economic development.

10. Deliberate Transition of Power to a Younger Generation of Leaders
Young leadership is more the rule than the exception in thriving rural communities. In many cases, these young people grew up in town and decided to stay or returned later to raise a family. In just as many situations, they are people who have decided to make a life in the community even though they grew up elsewhere. However, it’s typical in a successful community to have a formal or informal means for established leaders to bring new recruits into public service.

11. Celebration of Diversity in Leadership
Women, minorities, youth and newcomers are encouraged and welcomed into leadership circles where their ideas are treated as opportunities for exploration of new ways to improve community-building, not as threats to the “way it’s always been done.” The community welcomes new people, new ideas and new ways of doing things as it moves along a strategic path to greater success and enhanced sustainability.

12. Strong Belief in and Support of Education
Good schools are a point of pride as well as a stable employment force, and rural community leaders are very much aware of their school’s importance. However, this characteristic goes beyond the K-12 system to include an approach to life-long learning that puts education at the center of many community activities. Whether adult education is targeted at skills and job performance or hobbies and recreation, the successful community makes the most of education at all levels.

13. Problem-Solving Approach to Providing Health Care
Local health care is a common concern in rural communities, but strategies for delivery vary, depending on community needs. While one community may decide that keeping a doctor in residence should be the priority, another may choose to train as many people as possible as EMTs or to use telecommunications to augment a clinic. The point here is the variety of solutions to a common problem.

14. Strong Multi-Generational Family Orientation
These are family-oriented communities, with activities often built around family needs and ties. But the definition of family is broad, and it includes younger as well as older generations and people new to the community. A typical example of this attitude is the provision of child care for community town hall meetings, thus allowing young families to attend.
15. Strong Presence of Traditional Institutions that are Integral to Community Life
Churches are often the strongest force in this characteristic, but other types of community institutions such as newspapers and radio stations, hospitals and schools fill this role also. Service clubs retain a strong influence in social activities as well as in community improvement efforts.

16. Attention to Sound and Well-Maintained Infrastructure
Thriving rural communities understand the importance of physical infrastructures such as streets, sidewalks, water systems, sewage treatment plants and efforts that are made to maintain and improve them. In these communities, a clean-up day includes public parks and playgrounds, business owners keep sidewalks repaired, and volunteer labor and donated materials go a long way to maintain public buildings.

17. Careful Use of Fiscal Resources
Frugality is a way of life in successful small communities, and expenditures are made carefully. People aren’t afraid to spend money when they believe they should, and things are built to last. But, neither are they spendthrifts. Expenditures are often seen as investments in the future of the community.

18. Sophisticated Use of Technology Resources
Rural community leaders are knowledgeable about their communities beyond the information base available in the community. In an increasing number of places, high-speed internet access is revolutionizing all types of information access. Today, the applications of technology are so widespread in business, health care, education and recreation that the capacity of small towns to make use of these resources seems to be a strong indicator of success.

19. Willingness to Seek Help from the Outside
There’s little reluctance to seek help from outside resources. These communities understand the system of accessing resources, ranging from grants for infrastructure improvement to expertise about human service programs. Competing for such resources successfully is a source of pride for local leaders.

20. Conviction that, in the Long Run, You Have to Do It Yourself
Although outside help is sought when appropriate, it is nevertheless true that thriving small towns believe that their destiny is in their own hands. They are not waiting for some outsider to save them, nor do they believe that they can sit and wait for things to get better. Making a hometown a good place to live for a long time to come is a proactive assignment, and these local leaders know that no one will take care of a town as well as the people who live there.
